This past year was clearly a time of transition – for both Mount Zion Health Fund (MZHF) as well as for its major beneficiary, UCSF Mount Zion Medical Center.

MZHF began operating with its revised mission and guidelines just as UCSF Mount Zion was undergoing a major shift in its services and direction. As the fiscal year closed, UCSF Mount Zion had begun to reshape itself from a comprehensive hospital with all traditional departments to become a major outpatient-focused medical center. While working with UCSF to assist in that conversion, MZHF was also able to direct some of its resources to community-based programs that embody the same values and traditions.

Several of these projects were proposed by partner agencies in the Jewish community. The Jewish Community Library received support for its Roving Readers program, which brings books, cassettes, videotapes and conversation to homebound elderly, chronically ill, and disabled clients. The Library coordinates this program with the Bay Area Jewish Healing Center, which was granted funds to expand the reach of its chaplaincy services to a variety of institutions. Jewish Vocational Service received a grant to conduct outreach to those living with chronic illness, HIV and AIDS, to assist with their career and employment re-entry needs. The Jewish Home for the Aged successfully applied for funds to support a geriatric nurse practitioner, enabling the Home to evaluate a new model of enhanced patient care.

Exploring ways of improving elderly care was the focus of several other grants. The Goldman Institute on Aging (GIOA) will conduct research into the range of services needed by people with dementia who are enrolled in managed care plans. Additional resources for families with members suffering from Alzheimer's will be provided through a grant to the Alzheimer's Association to hire family case managers. Another grant will allow the North and South Market Adult Day Health Center to purchase physical therapy and rehabilitation equipment for an innovative "day health housing" project.

Another emerging theme in the delivery of health care is the ability to reach particular communities with various preventive health education measures. The Newcomers Health Program located at San Francisco General Hospital received a grant to hire Russian-speaking health educators. Many of the patients at the Refugee Clinic were formerly treated as outpatients at UCSF Mount Zion. The GIOA secured funds to evaluate the effectiveness of a health education program targeted specifically to African-Americans, while the San Francisco Immunization Coalition was granted money to assess the disparities in immunization rates for this same community. A grant to the Cancer Risk Program at the UCSF Mount Zion Cancer Center allowed them to hire an educator to provide community lectures that will increase knowledge and awareness of hereditary cancer risk.

The UCSF Mount Zion Cancer Center, a focal point for the Mount Zion campus, garnered significant funding. The Cancer Resource Center, now experiencing more than 800 patient visits per month, received another year of operating support. A major grant will support a patient service improvement project as the Cancer Center moves into its new building this fall. A third round of grants was made under the auspices of the Clinical Investigator Research Program, which enables the launching of new cancer research projects.

Women's health continued to emerge as a significant thrust of UCSF Mount Zion. Women's Health 2000, an annual conference, attracted over 300 participants to learn more about medical developments that could affect their lives. At the same time, funds supported strategic planning for the redesign of a comprehensive, site-based women's health program at UCSF Mount Zion.

As we enter the new fiscal year, we look forward to identifying and supporting other unmet health-related needs and to promoting creative and responsive solutions. As always, we thank our donors, fund advisors, and friends who enable us to fulfill this mission.
